FULLER JAXSON

The Dangerous Book of Poetry for Planes John Hunt Publishing
From Kitty Hawk to the jumbo jet and from the lunar landing to interstellar probes, American poets in On the Wing explore the phenomena of aviation and space flight. Edited by Karen Yelena Olsen, this balanced yet buoyant anthology collects 116 poems. The six thematic sections celebrate past achievements and the sensuous joys of flying ("Impulse of Delight"), revel in the vistas opening to the airborne traveler ("Worlds Above, Below, Within"), ponder the impact of air travel on everyday life ("Airplane Visions, Airport Truths"), outline the sinister role of the airplane in war ("Angle of Attack"), lament the shadow of airborne tragedy ("Icarus Falling"), and explore the mythic dimensions of space flight ("Space Odysseys"). Olsen's introduction traces the prehistory of flight literature from the Bible to the 19th century and sketches the evolution of 20th-century response, from initial exuberance to a more nuanced and probing examination of aviation and aerospace as they affect our lives. The book includes a short history of flight in the U.S. The product of a lifetime's passion for both flight and poetry, this collection will deeply interest those who have never been on a plane--and delight those who have.

Teaching and Learning Company

An entrepreneurial and engineering genius, Leroy Hill left his mark on 20th century aviation. But that was just the beginning. As a gifted Berkeley engineering graduate in the late teens, Hill succeeded in reengineering the famous "Liberty Engine" of World War I to fit into the legendary fighter DH-4, or "Flying Coffin." In the late 1920s his passion for aviation brought him to a new marketplace as twelve-year president of Air Associates that remarkable aviation catalog of everything from plane parts and repairs to whole aircraft. Later, in World War II, he founded the company that manufactured and distributed all the hose-clamps for the popular P-51 Mustang Fighter. A true entrepreneur, Leroy Hill was involved in sixty different companies either designing new technologies or marketing improved versions of the old. Politically, he was a lifelong anti-union activist working in the most unionized industries in the nation. Though he marched lockstep with no one, Hill remained to the end of his life a hardbitten opponent of big government who championed many conservative movements of his day. From Leroy Hill's substantial archives, including his voluminous diaries, author Craig Miner has distilled the heady public and private dynamics of an extraordinary life."

Budding Poets Kelsay Books

Mary K. O'Melveny's poems are fierce and tender, political and melodious all at the same time. Like a prayer, they use hidden rhyme for incantation and hypnosis. They will bring you to action if you need help with pressing the button to donate to a cause. They will guide you gently if you forgot how to be patient and kind. They will inspire you if you forgot how to have faith. They will help you heal and flourish if you're ailing. Above all, they will inspire you to be mindful of the earth, generous with nature, caring to birds. Full of storks, parakeets, and swans, these poems invite you to learn from birds about the resilience of refugees, the faith of the poor, the trust of the forlorn. "Talking indignant politics" or spelling out a prayer, O'Melveny's poems teach about companionship, curiosity, and optimism. -Dr. Lucia Cherciu, Professor, English Department, SUNY/Dutchess; Poet Laureate, Dutchess County, NY 2020-2022 This beautiful, courageous, truthful book makes for delightful reading. Mary K O'Melveny's Flight Patterns begins with memories rich in the physical joy of nature. Through these contemplative, imaginative and image-filled poems, we experience the poet's love of birds and her concern for losses in our natural environment. The collection touches on age, injustice and violence; the harm wrought by Covid-19, political events here and abroad; and threats to the Earth and its inhabitants, including those birds that the poet loves so dearly, valuable because they, "remind us of what we love rather than what we fear." Many of those fears are justified. To those who find themselves oppressed and undervalued, "flight" is a metaphor for escape. Here, it is also a metaphor for personal growth and a call to respond now to the progressive complexity and challenges of our changing world. These poems offer meditations and fantasy, dialogues between birds and humans and a path to reversing daily losses of "birdsong." Here, we can celebrate nature's ineffable, profoundly moving gifts and understand the work required to save ourselves and those who will follow us into the future. Fortunately, the poet imbues us with signs of enduring hope, supported by the persistence of living things that have survived over the millennia. -Rhina P. Espailat, Poet, Short Story Writer, Essayist, Translator, Teacher, Author of, most recently, And After All and The Field Readers of this collection will be struck by how consistently imaginative Ms. O'Melveny's poetry is. Her poems are atmospheric and magical, tender and humorous, revealing and smart. She also possesses a rare and keen eye for the connection of nature to sound, wisdom, and character. Highly recommended! -Joe Maita, Editor/Publisher, Jerry Jazz Musician

The Sterling/Bledsoe families staged their first family reunion in Stonewall, CO. in June of 2000. It proved to be an interesting event. It was a 'first time' meeting for many of the relatives and friends of the families and brought the surprising discovery that the Great Grandmother, Katie (Sterling) Bledsoe had disappeared as a young woman in her twenties and never been found. In 2003 Johanna Butler, Great granddaughter to Katie is hosting the family reunion to be held at Stonewall again, this time in late July. As she is working on 'fliers' to be sent to all the families and friends, she received a call from her college aged niece Galena Thorpe who asked if they might spend a part of her "spring break" together. The two women decided to go to Jefferson Montana and visit the old Bledsoe ranch thinking it would be a great 'get away'. In their visiting Joanna learns that ever since Galena suffered a head injury in a Basketball game at the college last year she has had moments of Clairvoyance. Later as they walk across the old river bed toward a stand of tall cottonwood trees Galena has one of those moments as she looks at Joanna in surprise and said, "I hear a woman crying." Then pointing to the base of the trees, she said...." and she is crying from the ground." After their video presentation at the reunion; a tall, dark and handsome stranger stepped forward and read a stunning confession from a paper crumbling with age that told once and for all what had happened to Katie Bledsoe. As the stranger read, his voice deep with emotion, Joanna began to feel a joy in her heart telling her, that as one mystery had ended, another was about to begin.

Poetry. Subversive, erotic, and sublime, POETRY FOR PLANES challenges the conventions of airplane reading. Family, faith, technology, celebrity--yes, they are here. But so too is sex as philanthropy, flight as weltschmerz, and grammar as the ultimate loneliness. In a world that often seems to have lost its affinity for wonder, POETRY FOR PLANES reminds us that our greatest sense is our sense of wordplay.

Rob Mixon was awarded the 1994 "flight Instructor of The Year Award" by the Federal Aviation Administration, flight Standards District Office, Miami, Florida. He is also an Adjunct Professor in Aviation at Miami-Dade Community College. Mixon's flight time includes 20,000 hours & his ratings are Certified Flight Instructor-airplane & Instrument, airline transport Pilot with single Engine Land, Multi-engine Land, Multi-engine Sea & glider ratings. The Art of Broomstick Flying uses a combination of the art & science of flight with back-to-basics skills & techniques used to train pilots in the 1920's before pilots were taught to fly mechanically & "by the numbers." It is both an easy to read instructor's guide & syllabus consisting of detailed skills training from lesson one through solo, with notations pertaining to specific training & student trouble shooting problems for the instructor.

Included in The Art Of Broomstick Flying is aviation poetry by award winning poet Rob Mixon's "Reflection of Flight." This poetry has appeared in Sport Aerobatics (back cover), Aviation Historian, Ballooning Magazine, Vintage Aircraft, Sport Aviation & publications by the Silver Wings Fraternity & The National Association of Flight Instructors. A review from Michael Harms, of Mountain View, California, describes Rob Mixon's writing: "Many pilots can flawlessly plan & execute a long cross-country flight culminating in a grass tickling three-point landing. And many instructors can inspire & motivate young pilots to reach out & feel the tremendous sense of accomplishment which is earned when the untried is replaced with the mastered. But few indeed are the pilots or instructors who are also poets & can write about these experiences in a way which makes the reader lose his earthly bounds, dream the skyborn dreams or sense the wonder of the freedom of flight. Mixon is such an instructor/poet. If you are looking for nostalgia in a training manual to learn the art of flight, want to "lose your earthly bounds" or find a diagnostic manual to solve the training problems encountered with students, The Art Of Broomstick Flying is the perfect gift for those wanting to learn to fly, the novice pilot, or the seasoned pilot/flight instructor.
